Chief Smith quits Venice department

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

VENICE — Police Chief Farris Smith is quitting the department to take a security guard job at Granite City Steel, the Journal learned Friday.

Smith, 44, could not be reached for comment, but Mayor Tyrone Echols confirmed that Smith was leaving for the "better pay" at the mill. A source at the mill confirmed that Smith is to start work next week.

Echols said Smith had about a month's paid vacation coming and said he didn't know if Smith would put in any more duty as chief.

"Technically, he's still an employee of the City of Venice," Echols said.

The mayor said he had not yet found a replacement. "I've given it a lot of thought, but as of yet I haven't come up with anybody. He said he didn't know whether Smith would be replaced from within the department or outside the department.

Echols said, "I knew it was coming. I don't blame him. It's a better opportunity." The mayor said the job only pays $18,000 a year — less than a patrolman makes in Madison.

Smith has served 20 years in the department, 11 as chief.

Although Smith's imminent retirement had been rumored for months, the Rev. Harold Wilson, chairman of the Venice Board of Police Commissioners, expressed surprise at the news.

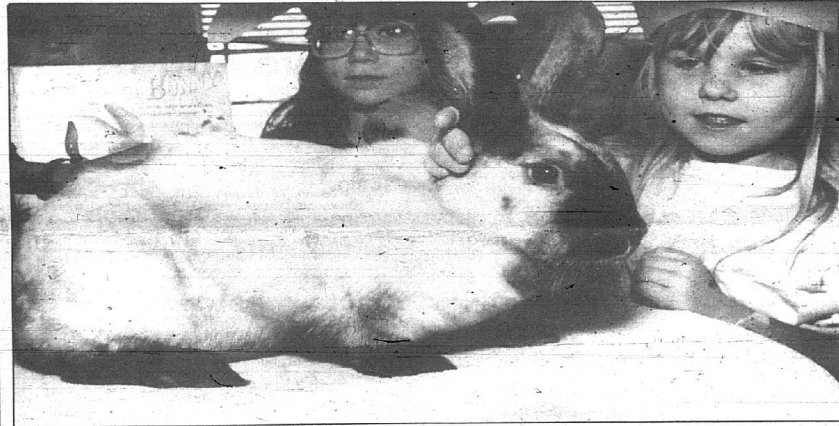

"You're telling me something I didn't know," Wilson said.

Alderman Silver Franklin, chairman of the City Council's Police Committee, didn't seem surprised at the news, although he said he hadn't had any word about Smith's departure.

Venice, because of its low pay scale, has lost many patrolmen to other local police departments through the years, and in particular has lost several officers in the last year alone.

Precincts added to library district

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — Six precincts were annexed into the newly formed Granite City Public Library District on Thursday by a Madison County judge.

Library officials sought to have Nameoki Township precincts 2, 6, 7, 11 and 12 and Venice Township Precinct 10 annexed into the district, which was formed by a vote of Granite City residents March 20.

The precincts annexed Thursday were those outside city limits that had voted to annex.

The vote to annex all unincorporated School District 9 territory failed overall, but Associate Judge Harrison elects not to show up.

In precincts where the proposal failed, officials may either seek a new vote on the next scheduled election day, residents may petition to join the district, or a "backdoor referendum" may be conducted to annex the territories, library officials said.

"The judge went along with the vote of the people and we're very happy about that," said board president Marshall Schroeder.

Residents of the village of Pontoon Beach and the city of Madison are not included in the library district, since both those municipalities have libraries.

The current nine-member appointed board will remain until the April 1991 election, at which time voters will choose a new seven-member board to replace the existing board.

Present members have not said whether they plan to seek the elective positions next year.

Harrison quits, Bellcoff likely next Demo chair

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Bellcoff is in and Harrison is out.

Madison Mayor John Bellcoff apparently ascended to the top of the Democratic mound in Madison County with Thursday's surprise announcement by Chairman Bill Harrison that he would step down after two years at the party's helm.

In announcing his decision, Harrison said he hoped the gesture would would unite the party and help its candidates win in the November elections in the county and the state.

"We don't need a chairmanship fight in Madison County this year to divide the party and distract us from our goals in November," Harrison said. "I will pledge my support and assistance to the new chairman, whomever it will be, and I will ask all Democrats to do the same."

Bellcoff said he found out about Harrison's decision Thursday morning over coffee with Harrison. He said Harrison gave him a number of papers on matters that would be brought up at Monday night's county convention at the courthouse in Edwardsville.

Bellcoff said he had two meetings with Executive Vice President George L. Donohoo, who will preside at the convention if Harrison elects not to show up.

Bellcoff, who formally announced his candidacy for the chairmanship just over a week ago, said he didn't know of anybody else who planned to seek the post. "But you never know," he said.

The chairman is elected by the precinct committeemen. Bellcoff said he had been seeking support from committeemen since January.

Harrison, who has been a committeeman for 33 years, was elected chairman two years ago, replacing Mac Warfield. Harrison had come under fire after his election for not accepting recommendations from township chairmen for appointments to the Executive Committee.

He was criticized also for his decision to oppose the retention of three Democratic judges in 1988 because they had refused to pay $12,000 in "bug money" to the party's campaign fund.

Harrison barely kept his Precinct 16 committeeman post in the election March 20, beating Bob Porter 22-78.

In parting, Harrison said he was proud to have served as chairman of the party, but "now I would like to exit gracefully."

EPA agrees to fund blood tests

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, announced Friday the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has agreed to fund random blood lead testing of Granite City residents.

The blood tests will determine what effect the lead from the Taracorp/Wal Industries cleanup site has had on neighbors.

No dollar amount has been attached to the decision, said Costello, spokesman Brian Lott, but the timetable calls for the testing to take place by summer.

Lott also said that the EPA has apparently delayed announcement of which option it will take in the Taracorp cleanup. Previously, EPA officials had said they would decide by the end of March. "Now, I expect it will be Monday or Tuesday before we hear something," Lott said Friday.

On March 1, Costello hosted a Washington meeting where Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse and Madison Mayor John Bellcoff asked an EPA official to consider funding blood tests to determine the health effects on area residents.

At the meeting, Frank Costello, deputy regional administrator for the U.S. EPA, said he would discuss the proposal.

"I am pleased that the U.S. EPA has decided to grant the mayors' request," Costello said. "These tests will provide more information as to any effect on the public health from exposure to lead in the community around the Superfund site."

The U.S. EPA will pay for the tests, but they will be performed by a governmental health agency yet to be announced. "It is important that we make every effort to protect the health of the public in that area, and these tests will add to the body of evidence to be considered for potential health hazards posed by the Taracorp site," Costello said.

Man feared dead after bridge jump

VENICE — An elderly Venice man apparently jumped to his death from the McKinley Bridge early Thursday morning.

William Russell, 73, of the 1100 block of Calhoun Street, had been complaining of poor health and unbearable pain in the hours before his car was found with its engine running at about 3 a.m. on the bridge.

Russell left a note at home saying he couldn't take any more pain. He had been complaining hours earlier about intense abdominal pain. A relative told police he had said, "I'd be better off dead."

Rescue teams from the U.S. Coast Guard and the Twin Rivers Rescue Squad searched the Mississippi River for 10 miles downstream Thursday without finding Russell's body.

Officials and marine traffic downstream were alerted to look for the body, said Coast Guard Lt. Alan Carr. The Guard is no longer "actively searching" for the body, he said.

Motorcyclists face two big threats

The following article is by Secretary of State Jim Edgar.

If you ride a motorcycle, the two biggest threats to your safety are oncoming cars that turn left in front of you and cars on side streets that pull out into your lane.

Never depend on "eye contact" as a sign that a driver has seen you and will yield the right of way. A driver can look right at you and fail to "see" you.

The best way to help drivers see you is to ride in the center of the traffic lane with your headlight on. Each traffic lane gives a motorcyclist three "mini-lanes," or 4-foot-wide paths of travel. Although grease strips caused by droppings from other vehicles can take up to two feet of the middle "mini-lane," you can ride to the left or right of the grease strip and still be within the center portion of the traffic lane.

Turn signals not only tell others what you plan to do, but make you easier to see. Use your turn signals whenever you turn or change lanes, even if you think no one else is around. The car you do not see is the one that will give you the most trouble. Do not forget to turn your signal off. If you leave it on, an oncoming driver may think you plan to turn again and pull directly into your path.

Another way to help a motorist see you is to stay out of his blind spot. Either pass him or drop back. When passing a car, get through the blind spot as quickly as possible.

Use your mirrors frequently and remember that motorcyclists have blind spots, too. Before changing lanes, look at traffic to the side.

The Board of Directors is composed of elected and appointed officials from the seven county region of Madison, Bond, Clinton, Monroe,

Family reunification funded

SPRINGFIELD — Metro East families with children in foster care may soon be reunited through help from the second phase of Family First.

Director Gordon Johnson of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services said the Children's Home and Aid Society, Holyoak Youth and Family Services, Catholic Charities of Springfield and DCF's East St. Louis Regional Office have received family reunification grants totaling $441,000 to serve families in Madison and St. Clair counties.

The four awards are among 19 grants statewide totaling $3.4 million. Services funded by the grants are expected to begin no later than May 1.

Family First is the state's third round of Family First, the Illinois Family Preservation Act of 1988.

This law mandates that abused and neglected children be protected in their own homes whenever possible.

It also mandates reunification services when children need to be placed in foster care, as well as other services aimed at keeping adoptive families together.

"In all but the most serious abuse cases, the department's goal has always been to reunite children with their families," Johnson said.

"As with other Family First programs, though, this effort is unique because it will offer intensive, immediate response services that were unavailable before."

Family reunification services will include counseling, crisis intervention, emergency home-maker assistance, child and respite care, housing assistance, increased family visitations, and the use of foster parents as part of the treatment team.

"Most importantly," Johnson added, "workers will be available around-the-clock to serve clients in their homes. The central focus will be on permanency and the creation of a stable home environment."

"Under Family First, we already have family preservation services in place throughout the state, rushing services into troubled homes instead of rushing kids out. Now we have the same kind of help for families that have been separated."

Johnson said the success of family reunification efforts will be measured by how well the grant agencies meet the following goals:

"All families referred to an agency will have face-to-face contact with a worker within 48 hours."

"Ninety percent of the referred families will receive at least two kinds of services aimed at meeting their needs."

"Ninety-five percent of the services planned for each family will be completed on time."

"Eighty percent of the referred families will see an improvement in the problems and a reduction in the risks that caused the abuse or neglect to happen."

"Seventy percent of the families who are reunified while receiving services will stay together for at least a year after the services end."

"Eighty percent of referred families will not become subjects of indicated child abuse neglect reports for at least six months after services end."

Foster parents needed in area

GRANITE CITY — The Illinois Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) is seeking help from area families willing to care for foster children of all ages.

"These are youngsters whose biological parents, for varied reasons, are unable to care for them."

"Some children may have been abandoned, others abused or neglected. Until their problems are resolved, they need foster care. They need foster parents who will give them the advantage of a warm and secure home environment," a spokesman said.

Currently, there is a need for additional foster homes for teenagers as well as groups of brothers and sisters.

DCFS provides a monthly board payment to help cover the basic expenses of care for a child. Medical, dental and other special expenses are also paid by the state.

Those interested in foster care may call Jeanette Rettle, resource development specialist, at 708-9385 or 1-800-624-KIDS.

On that Saturday morning, the bus will head for Pella for Tulip Time, often called "Spring's Masterpiece."

A full day is planned to include street-scrubbers, Dutch dancers, stage performances, a bus tour, a museum visit, a parade and a meal at a church.

There will also be time for browsing at markets.

On Sunday, May 13, the group will head home by a different route through southern Iowa and stop for a visit in historic Nauvoo, Ill., originally a Mormon settlement.

There will be a couple of hours there to sightsee before a buffet meal at the Nauvoo Hotel.

The cost of the trip is $158 for a single room, $118 each for two to a room, $108 each for three to a room and $108 each for four to a room. This includes the bus, motel, three meals and all the activities in Pella.

According to a recent study, 90 percent of American adults had their blood pressure taken recently, but fewer than 5 percent were monitoring their cholesterol level.

High blood cholesterol is one of the risk factors for developing heart disease.

Elevated blood cholesterol levels can lead to early development of hardening of the arteries and coronary heart disease.

Coronary heart disease is the cause of almost 30 percent of the two million deaths in the United States each year.

The National health institute recommends that all adults have their blood cholesterol checked.

Muny searching for Broadway hit

Calling it "a season that covers all age groups and provides shows from different eras," Muny President William Culver has announced six of the seven shows that will make up the Muny's 72nd season in Forest Park.

All shows will run for one week each. They are:

- "West Side Story," June 25 to July 1;
- "Jesus Christ Superstar," July 2 to 8;
- "Bye Birdie," July 9 to 15;
- "Cinderella," July 23 to 29;
- "Brigadoon," July 30 to Aug. 5;
- "No No Nanette," Aug. 6 to 12.

The yet-to-be announced seventh show is to run the week of either Aug. 13 to 19 or Aug. 27 to Sept. 2. Sources backstage say that show will be "Meet Me in St. Louis."

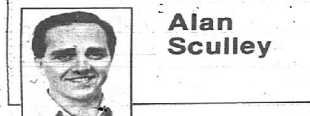

William Culver

Culver said that for the final show the Muny is endeavoring to mount its own locally-produced version of a recent Broadway musical that never has played St. Louis. While "Meet Me in St. Louis" has played the Muny in 1960, 1965 and 1977, the current Broadway had new staging and songs.

Stars and casting have not been announced for the season's shows, but Culver said that headliners would include names from television and movies, including a few vintage Hollywood stars in the casting of "No No Nanette."

Negotiations are under way to make a double-bill of the McGuire Sisters and saxophonist Boots Randolph as the final attraction the weekend of Sept. 7 in the Fox Theater's Superfest series of entertainment attractions for the summer. Although everything is not finalized, Fox officials are hoping to have the booking finalized soon.

Harry Hamm is entertainment editor for both KMOX-AM (1120) and the CBS Radio Network.

Local group takes 'Giant' step up

Uncle Tupelo, a Belleville, band that has been one of the leading lights on the St. Louis original-music scene, has taken a "Giant" step on the road to success.

The group recently finished recording its debut album, "No Depression," for Giant Records. It should hit the stores around May 1.

The band, which includes guitarist Jay Farrar, bassist Jeff Tweedy and drummer Mike Heidorn, recorded the album in late January in Boston. Their producers were Paul Kolderie and Sean Slade, who have produced such alternative rock favorites as The Pixies, Throwing Muses and Dinosaur Jr.

Tweedy said the 10-day session with Kolderie and Slade went very well, and the group managed to capture its combustible mix of country, blues, folk and rock.

"It was no-frills, let's get it down and get as live a feel as we could," except this time it will be in tune," Tweedy said, showing a self-deprecating sense of humor.

The LP will include 10 Uncle Tupelo original songs, including such long-standing live-show favorites as "Whiskey Bottle," "Screen Door" and "Before I Break."

Formed three years ago, Uncle Tupelo long has had its sights set on playing original music.

Uncle Tupelo began to make serious headway in its goal to be a national band after recording a demo tape about a year ago. The tape, sent to many record companies, quickly caught the attention of Giant Records, Tweedy said.

Representatives of the label came to an Uncle Tupelo gig in Louisville, Ky., and then arranged for the group to play at the CMJ (College Music Journal) Convention in New York City last year. The record deal followed shortly thereafter.

Tweedy said the band has been pleased with the support Giant is giving. Because the label releases only a few albums each quarter, it can put a lot of effort into promoting each release, he said.

"They're into the band and seem pretty sincere about trying to get our name out there," Tweedy said.

New bookings include:

- Reggae artists Tony Bell & Kutche, Friday (April 6) at Off Broadway, 3509 Lemay Ave. Tickets are $4 at the door.
- Rhythm and blues rockers Barrance Whitfield & the Savages, April 12 at Off Broadway. Tickets are $7 at the door.

"Zydeco band Buckwheat Zydeco, April 19 at Mississippi Nights 214 N. First St. Showtime 9 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance, $12 day of show.

Intendo craze(y): Making addicts out of players

By Jim Haverstick
Staff writer

If you fear you are becoming a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle, or you have the sudden urge to change your name to Mario or Luigi, then you are displaying the early warning signs of the latest American addiction. You are a Nintendo junkie.

The Nintendo home video game craze has reached epidemic proportions. According to Nintendo, 171.5 million Nintendo Entertainment Systems will be sold for home use in 1990, said Tom Sarris, a representative of Hill and Knowlton public relations firm.

NES and its game cartridges netted $2.7 million dollars in sales in 1989, Sarris said. According to the North Pole Poll (a statistical evaluation of toys sold during the Christmas season), NES was the top selling toy, both in dollar amounts and in volume, for the 1987-1989 Christmas seasons.

"The Legend of Zelda" game package has sold 2.8 million copies since its introduction in 1987. "Super Mario Brothers" has sold 18.7 million since it appeared in 1987 and its sequel "Super Mario Brothers 2" has sold 3.5 million games packages since 1988.

One explanation for the success of the games is their challenge, said A.J. Mathis, 10, a Belleville resident who admits his addiction.

"Super Mario Brothers" has eight worlds with four levels per world that the player has to guide the characters Mario or Luigi through in order to win the game. Each level in each new world is filled with increasingly difficult obstacles including fire-spitting villains and icy labyrinths.

"It takes a lot of hand-eye coordination to get to the end of one of the games," A.J. said.

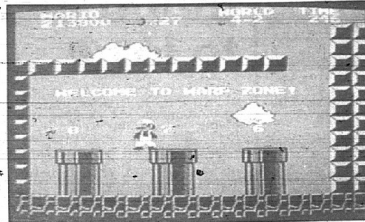

Some of his favorite games include "Super Mario Brothers 2," "California Games" and "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles." A.J. said he makes it a ritual to play two or three hours a day—every day.

A.J. has been a Nintendo fanatic for two years. He openly admits that many times he would rather stay inside and play Nintendo than go out and play with his friends.

A.J. subscribes to Nintendo Power magazine, proudly sports his Nintendo watches and his Mario Brothers T-shirt, and takes his Game Boy portable Nintendo game player with him practically everywhere he goes.

He is a natural at video games. A.J. quickly mastered Atari video games at the age of 3, said Tony Mathis, his mother. He discovered Nintendo at age 7 and saved his money for a year to buy his own game set.

Now he can't go past a video rental store without wanting to run in and check out the new games, his mother said. He is anxiously awaiting the release of "Super Mario Brothers 3" on NES cartridge.

The challenge of the games is a natural attraction, but the graphics lure potential game-players, too. The cavernous worlds of the Mario Brothers are brightly colored and multi-layered. Unlike the characters in other games, Nintendo figures move their arms and legs when running and jumping from one world to the next.

Not only do the graphics and challenge of Nintendo games infect children, but adults are susceptible to the disease as well.

Nintendo of America, a Washington-based subsidiary of the 101-year-old Nintendo Co. Ltd. toy manufacturers of Japan, is well aware of the affect its games have on adults. According to consumer hotline operators, 38 percent of the game players who phone Nintendo are over 31 years of age and 35 percent are between the ages of 11 and 19.

Kevin Webster, A.J.'s band director in the Belleville district 118 band, has caught the bug. But he strongly denies an addiction.

"It's something fun to do in my spare time, but I am definitely not addicted the way some kids are," he said.

The graphics is the exciting thing that captures the adult eye. Nintendo is nothing like the pinball games that today's adults grew up with, Webster said.

Doctors: Nintendo not a health risk

There is absolutely no clinical evidence to suggest that sitting in front of the television hour after hour—grimacing at the screen and pushing the buttons on the Nintendo game control panel—has any adverse physical or mental effects on children or adults.

That is the opinion of Dale Kuhn, a psychotherapist with Care and Counseling's Belleville office. However, that does not mean an addiction to the games is not part of another problem.

"Children or teen-agers who are depressed may spend a lot of time playing the game in order to hide from their problems and avoid interaction with other people," Kuhn said. "People use television and movies in the same way, but it is usually only a temporary problem."

An addiction to the games often serves to frustrate parents, but using the games as a means of escape is not necessarily unhealthy for children or adults. If the player truly enjoys the games, they can have a soothing effect, Kuhn said. As long as the games do not become a replacement for normal human relationships there is nothing wrong with playing them.

Some people feel that the games can actually be healthy for children.

"I think they help kids develop good eye-hand coordination and other skills that they are going to need in today's computer society," said Tony Mathis whose son, A.J., is a Nintendo junkie.

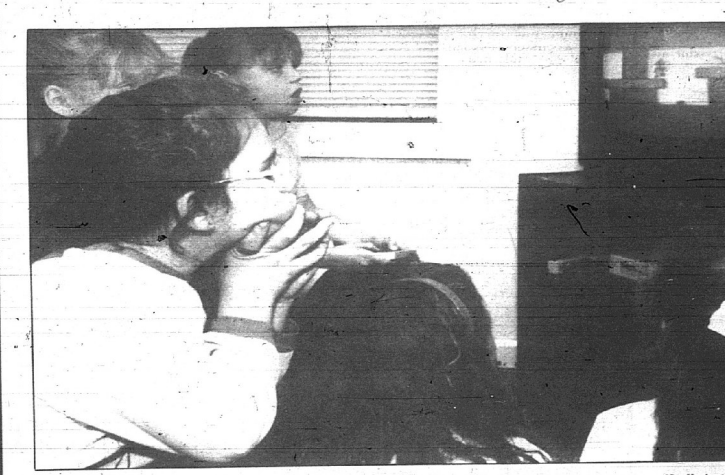

She also added that there are worse things kids can get hooked on besides video games. When her son is in the house playing games she can supervise his behavior, and she can prevent game playing from interfering with his school work or his other activities.

A St. Louis plumber has come up with a novel way to keep his 12-year-old son from playing too much Nintendo. He has the boy help him on the job evenings. His pay is a new Nintendo game.

Only one problem, though. Recently he wanted the boy to help one evening. No way, said the lad. Why not?

He told Pop he was tired of getting whatever game was on sale. He wanted to be able to pick his own game.

"This is a labor dispute," explained the boy's mother.

What's hot

Dave Wolf, proprietor of Dave's Movies & More in Granite City, said it's hard to keep up with all the Nintendo cartridges. His store has more than 450 titles available.

"There's four or five new ones a week," he said.

His hottest rentals include Black Bass, Batman, Tetris, Baseball Stars, Ironsword, Code Name Viper, and Double Dragon II.

He said he expects the brand-new Baseball Simulator, just released this week, to be "real hot."

Of course, the hottest game in the country. It's got to be number 1? Wolf said it isn't even available to rental outlets.

And the winner is... Super Mario III.

The following is a list of the 10 most popular Nintendo game cartridge rentals this year at BAC Video in Swansea:

1. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles
2. NFL
3. Super Mario Brothers II
4. California Games
5. Paperboy
6. Who Framed Roger Rabbit?
7. Tetris
8. Ducktales
9. Bayou Billy
10. Blades of Steel

A mother looks at Nintendo's impact

The following essay is written by a Granite City mother, C.W. Hickman

Christmas came to our house, with an extra special gift from Grandma. My husband and I could hardly contain ourselves as we watched patiently for each of our six children to finish opening their presents. They showed the usual glee, expressing their joy of each gift. As the excitement of opening gifts slackened, they noticed that one, still remained.

I purposely took my time pulling it out from under the tree. Wasting more time than was necessary, it was my way of getting back for all their rotten little things: never cleaning their rooms, fighting over whose turn it was to do the dishes; letting the dog starve, because each thought the other fed her.

This was my time, and letting them squirm for a few seconds was in a sense, a small victory for me.

I tore the first strip of wrapping paper, a shout went out. Grandma and grandpa outdid themselves. Hands came from everywhere. "We got a Nintendo for Christmas."

Being old pros and working on a second "Atari" the ground rules for the Nintendo were laid down. I knew that I could not afford to replace broken paddles and game cartridges. Grandma had not volunteered.

Hooking it up was a breeze. With the game cartridge inserted, the power button was pushed. Super Mario Brothers leaped into our lives.

At that moment, when play began, we had no idea of the magic, and delight that this seemingly innocent game could bring us.

We laughed, stayed up until the television screen blurred, from fatigue. Nintendo fever had struck.

The days rolled by, Nintendo's grip was taking its toll on my family.

My once cute, adorable, children became selfish, cruel, greedy and downright vicious, experiencing a personality change each time the game was turned on.

My brother-in-law whom I talked into spending the night Christmas, is still here. Leaving only to catch up on much needed sleep, and clean clothes.

No one knew what day it was. All hours were spent on figuring out the hidden secrets of Mario Land. Could there be a free mushroom in every new world? How many warp zones were there. Our three meals a day became quick, grabbed snacks, so as not to miss the possibility of a new discovery.

Now spring is closing. My husband's bags underneath his eyes are finally starting to disappear, but the battleground, that was once my living room, shows no signs of a cease fire.

A day doesn't go by that I don't threaten to send this glorious gift back to their grandmother! We have no clean dishes to eat off, I fear for the children each time they enter their room, the possibility of getting lost among the garbage, grows greater with each passing day. My infant daughter must feel that she has suddenly become the only child, taking the seat, not to another sibling, but to a machine.

For all the yelling and threatening I do, the Nintendo somehow manages to get turned back on.

In the background, I hear the familiar tune that sends Mario and Luigi into the fascinating world that its creator made. I entertain. Did the creator have any idea how much it would change peoples lives and attitudes.

I can't say that I haven't been affected. I'm stuck, in world 8-3, and no matter how many extra men I go in with, I end up killing them all. We have not saved the princess yet. I'm sure she has been saved many times by many people. I can't help but to wonder, has everyone who received or bought this wonder gift, experience the uproar that this family is now going through.

In closing, I feel that the most important issue now concerning this whole Nintendo business, is "Where is the free-mushroom in world 8-3?"

Birthday event, vacationers return

Steve "Blackie" Trgovich of West Chain of Rocks Road was the guest of honor at a birthday party on March 25.

The party was hosted by his wife, Clara, and their children, Kathy Bledsoe, Donna Jenkins, Susan Willard and Mike Trgovich, and the honoree's brother, Lewis Trgovich. The affair was held at the Moose Hall in Wood River. The "old buzzard" theme was used to its fullest. A buffet dinner was served and music was provided by D.J. Richard Bauer and his wife.

Although attendance was limited due to the inclement weather, about 350 guests were present, including the honoree's lifelong friend and school chum, Robert Fulton, and wife of Paris, Ill.

Trgovich marked his 75th birthday on March 25. He retired from Lybarger Materials, after 40 years of service with the company. At present, he is working as a senior employee at the American Railroad, where he can put to good use his skills and years of experience.

Harold and Mary Duckett of Voight Place have returned from Lake Okechobee, Fla., where they visited her sister and brother-in-law, Wilma and Orion Holmes. The Holmes' make their home in Williamsville, Mo. but spend the winter in Florida. The travelers and their hosts enjoyed visiting and the beautiful weather. While the men were out fishing in Lake Okechobee, catching their limit of fish each day, the ladies were out sightseeing. Included in their tours were Fort Meyers and Fort Pierce.

Pearl Turner of Patricia Drive and her sister, Evelyn Davis of Cottage Hills, have returned from West Palm Beach, Fla., where they spent three weeks with their brother, Melvin Crouch, and his wife, Betty.

Turner, Davis and their hosts were visited by their nephew, Richard Crouch, his wife, Norene, and son, Justin, of Amarillo, Texas, and Turner's daughter-in-law, Julie Turner of Miami. Julie is the wife of the late Joe Turner, a former Granite City resident.

Faith Chapel General Church, 664 Ashland Ave., will hold a revival on April 4 through April 8. Services will begin at 7 p.m. The church theme, "I Just Feel Like Something Good is About to Happen," is also the title of the opening song. Everyone is welcome.

There will be a special singing by the Joyful Noise and preaching by Evangelist Handy Volmer.

The revival will conclude with an all-day service and a covered dish dinner on Sunday, April 8.

The Chouteau Township Senior Citizens held their annual corned beef and cabbage dinner on March 22. There were 76 members and five guests present. The invocation was given by the club chaplain, the Rev. Willard Myers.

Following dinner and a short meeting, a drawing to determine the winner of a quilt and other gifts was held. The drawing was arranged to raise money for the seniors' beautification project at a park adjacent to their meeting hall.

The first place prize, a handmade, queen-size Log Cabin quilt, was won by Carl Horstmeier of Pontoon Beach; second place, a pair of dinner tickets, was won by Fred Aldridge of Granite City; and third place, a pair of hand-embroidered pillow cases, went to Jean Cripps of Mitchell.

Sally Segar, Delphia Deloney, and Louisa Hall were recognized for having sold the most tickets.

Confirmations at Lutheran churches; St. John members to elect pastor

Confirmation ceremonies will be conducted at two Lutheran churches on the next two Sundays.

Concordia Lutheran Church, 23rd Street and Grand Avenue, will confirm two confirmands, Don M. Murphy and Mark S. Schuette, at 10:15 a.m. today (Sunday). Performing the service will be the congregation's vacancy pastor, the Rev. Samuel Boda. Holy Communion also will be celebrated.

On the following Sunday, April 8, four will be confirmed at St. John Lutheran Church, 2001 St. Clair Ave. They will include Matthew J. Boland, Amy Rebecca Gebhardt, David S. Justic and Jennifer Lynn Franklin. Boda will officiate at the confirmation.

Members of the class will receive their first communion during Holy Week on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Those receiving their confirmation have attended weekly classes at St. John Lutheran Church, with Boda conducting the sessions.

St. John Lutheran Church members, 13 and older, will be voting for the next pastor at the church today at 6:30 p.m. Elders will meet at 5:30 p.m. The Rev. David Hudak of Streator, circuit counselor, will serve as leader and chairperson of the special

"call meeting."

Voting members at Concordia Lutheran Church will soon hold their "call meeting" to select their next pastor.

Both congregations will vote from approved lists of pastors, nominated by voting members of each church. If the first minister "called" does not accept the call to serve, each congregation will continue meeting and voting until a pastor responds to the call, it was explained.

Conducting "call meetings" at Concordia will be the Rev. Gary Galen of Troy, circuit counselor of the Southern Illinois District.

The teachers will be honored at a dinner Tuesday, April 3, in the Oak-Hickory Rooms of the University Center.

Guest speaker for the event is Edward Lightfoot, principal of Eunice Smith Elementary School in Alton and recipient of the Illinois Distinguished Educator Award in 1988.

Among the recipients are: Cahokia: Margaret Glass, special education, Centerville School.

Federal minimum wage goes up, local critics speak out

By Carl Hott
Staff Writer

Though he thinks it's well-intentioned, Gonzales believes the new federal minimum wage law, taking effect April 1, may not be all it's cracked up to be.

"I have a lot of mixed feelings about it," said Gonzales, the manager/owner of The Chuck Wagon in Fairview Heights. Gonzales independently owns and operates the store. He has about 20 employees, half of whom are in high school.

"I think it's going to hurt the people it's designed to help. As a small business, I have two choices: pass the extra cost on to the consumer, or cut some of the hours of the employees," he said.

"We've had to raise prices for insurance and utilities. With the competition, there's a limit to how much people will want to spend."

The minimum wage is being raised from $3.35 to $3.80 per hour as a result of a bill passed by Congress last fall. In April 1991, the minimum wage will climb another 45 cents, to $4.25 per hour.

The federal law may or may not apply to businesses in Illinois, depending on their size, said Sylvia Katske, special adviser to the director of the Illinois Department of Labor in Chicago. The law applies to companies with four or more employees, she said.

Though the pay boost may help employees pocket a little more money, business owners have their doubts about the law's effectiveness.

Dave Embury, owner of one of the 17 McDonald's restaurants in the Metro East area, said he believes the minimum wage increase would be more effective if the federal government received less of the money in taxes, thus giving more to the employee.

Embury, formerly was the McDonald's owner in Granite City.

According to information he has gathered, Embury said, the employee receives only 20 percent of the actual money raised through the increase. The other 80 percent, from sales and employee paychecks, goes to the federal government.

"I think it's a selfish notion on the part of the legislators. Our research shows that every time food goes up a cent or two, transactions decrease. In order to make a profit, the costs have to go to the customer."

McDonald's, Embury added, is stereotyped as a minimum-wage job. But the majority of the 500 employees in his nine stores have received raises for good job performance, he said.

Teresa Wylie, 20, has been an employee of Cloth World in Fairview Heights for over two and a half years. She has been making $3.60 per hour, and said she is "very glad" that the minimum wage is going up.

Wylie is going to attend at McKendree College. Wylie helps support both herself and her father's medical expenses.

"I've been yelling and screaming for two years for it to go up. $3.35 isn't enough for anyone to live on," she said.

Instead of bringing employees up to the cost of living, the increase may cause a "ripple effect" on Metro East employment, said Scott Schanuel, executive director of Belleville Economic Progress Inc.

"As representatives of businesses, we opposed it," Schanuel said. "The issue is how it causes all increases to creep upward. Those people who are already getting $4.25 an hour when the increases go into effect are going to expect more."

In fact, he said, the law will probably have little bearing on cost-of-living increases.

"Basically, (the increase) will be affecting part-time employees and youths, who may not be able to get the jobs as they were before," Schanuel said.

"It doesn't affect a head of a household as much as youths, as well as those already seeking employment."

Dixon, Simon fight new Clean Air bill

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sens. Alan Dixon and Paul Simon have introduced a series of amendments to the Clean Air Act in a last-ditch effort to soften the bill's economic impact on the Midwest.

The two Illinois Democrats pushed through an amendment March 28 that would prolong research into reducing ozone-forming emissions from aerosol cans — 90 percent of which are produced in Illinois.

But the senators failed, in a 71-26 vote, to pass an amendment providing a tax credit for coal-cleaning technologies. Dixon and Simon have played a leading role in a number of proposals to change the landmark Clean Air legislation, but have been repeatedly defeated because their measures ran contrary to a bipartisan compromise reached in early March between the Senate and President George Bush.

"We in the Midwest and Appalachia know we are getting a raw deal. This bill is not fair," Dixon told the Senate while introducing his tax credit amendment March 28.

"If we could stop it and make it fair, we would. But we can't because we know that we just don't have the votes."

Sen. Max Baucus, the Montana Democrat who has led the fight to strengthen the clean air bill in the Senate, called Dixon's amendment a "deal breaker," adding that "regional cost allocation was exhaustively discussed" in earlier talks.

The Senate was more receptive to legislation extending research on aerosol pollution from two years to three years, a measure that had been pushed by a number of Illinois industries.

"This will allow us to more effectively reduce pollutants and should help prevent the loss of jobs in this industry," Simon said after the debate.

The previous week, both senators from Illinois also were on the floor introducing amendments to protect jobs and industries in the Midwest.

Dixon failed to gain passage for an amendment that would have protected domestic industries from foreign importers that do not use the same clean-air standards as those required in the United States.

The legislation exempts utilities using cyclone boilers — furnaces capable of burning the high-sulfur coal produced in southern Illinois — from certain clean-air requirements until low-cost technology is developed.

Met rule will keep Red out of dugout

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Since 1979, Red Schoendienst has seen virtually every Cardinals' game from his seat in the dugout. But come the Cardinals' opener Monday night, he won't be there.

Not that he doesn't want to be. Schoendienst still is a member of the Cardinals' coaching staff and will be on the field in uniform working during batting practice before the game against the Montreal Expos, and before every other game this year.

But once batting practice is over, Schoendienst will become a man without a job. He will have to go back to the clubhouse, change out of his uniform and find some other place to watch the game.

Schoendienst, and some other coaches around the majors, are the victims of a silly rule installed this year to appease Mets' officials. It seems the Mets were growing concerned that they had a lot fewer coaches than the cross-town Yankees, and they thought that gave their fans an impression they were cheap or weren't trying.

So they went to the lords of baseball and asked them to establish a rule limiting teams to five coaches in uniform during games — in most cases a hitting coach, pitching coach, first and third bases coaches and a bullpen coach. All others had to be out of the dugout when the game began.

Schoendienst isn't very happy about it, but there isn't any way the Cardinals can get around the rule. The Mets tried the same thing a few years ago and failed, but this time the rule is going into effect.

"I'd like to be on the bench," said Schoendienst, who as either a coach or manager has been sitting in the dugout since his playing career ended in 1963. "You're in the game more."

At home games, Schoendienst said he plans to sit behind home plate or watch portions of the game from the team's video room, hoping he can pick up something that he can relay to manager Whitey Herzog in the dugout.

On the road, Schoendienst suspects he will sit in the press box. He will not have an official job, such as an eye-in-the-sky scout, but he will still be observing and trying to help any way he can.

"I'll just watch and keep little things on my own," he said.

Gravy train tickets in hands of voters

Tuesday, the gravy train stops in St. Louis County. Toot, toot and all aboard.

Porter, bring me a football team and make it snappy.

Football really isn't what Tuesday's election is all about. It concerns public facilities, and the St. Louis region investing some money in itself instead of waiting for Ambeuser-Busch to do it. But football is a nice place to hang your helmet while we wait to see just how far into the 1990s the St. Louis area is willing to go before it decides to do something to help itself.

Tuesday, St. Louis County has to decide if it will pony up 25 percent of the cost of expanding the downtown Cervantes Convention Center. That expansion will include a football stadium that will make NFL honchos weep tears of joy.

All things being equal, this vote should be a cakewalk. Pay a little, get a lot. Sweet. Easy.

Unfortunately, the time line of St. Louis professional football is smudged with so many examples of ignorance, disappointment and greed that nothing involving pro football ever has seemed sweet or easy.

Bill Bidwill ran the local NFL outlet for nearly three decades and in all that time the only decent thing he ever did was leave here to stop around the leisure-buck trough in Phoenix. The worst thing Bidwill did — aside from foisting Joe Sullivan on the sporting public — was leave behind the idea that we all would have to be nuts to dump public money into a project that benefits somebody who makes his living running a pro football franchise.

The nightmare that was Bidwill is only one of the problems Tuesday's should-be-but-isn't-easy decision the vote faces in St. Louis County.

There also is the nagging business that this is another tax, that this isn't to fund a new hockey arena, that if the St. Louis NFL Partnership wants an expansion franchise and a place to play so damn badly it ought to pay its own way, that the minority contractors are huffing and puffing that some people aren't certain that a convention center expansion-football stadium (especially one that's in the city) is worth the headache.

St. Louis County is the last — and thus the key — player to ante up in this game. The City of St. Louis already is in for 25 percent.

SIGN OF THE TIMES: Varsity Field sits empty — and nearly below sea level — as the week-long rains forced another postponement Friday. The Warrior baseball team has yet to play a game, but with clearing skies expected Friday, Granite City should finally open the season Monday in Roxana.

No fooling, rainouts continue

Today might be April Fool's Day, but you can believe us. One look out the window this week should have been convincing.

The Warrior baseball team, which has yet to play a game this season, was postponed again Friday, as was the Lady Warrior soccer team. The baseball team's double-header with Wood River — which was a makeup of Wednesday's washed-out game — was called off Friday morning and no makeup date has been established. Weather permitting, the Warriors will finally open the season Monday at Roxana in a 4 p.m. game.

Athletic director Greg Patton said Friday that the March 24 double-header with Washington that was snowed out will definitely be made up on April 9 with a noon double-header. April 9 is a Monday, but it's the Easter holiday week.

The Lady Warrior soccer team was rained out of its R-9 Tournament game against Oakville on Friday, but the Lady Warriors were supposed to play Saturday night. The tournament was to be played at St. Louis Soccer Park in Ponton at 8 p.m. Granite City was to play half games (40 minutes each) against Oakville and Mehlville. Aquinas Mercy is also in the tournament and was going to play half games against the same two schools on an adjoining field.

There are two fields at Soccer Park in addition to the main field and Saturday's games were to be played on the two auxiliary fields.

Weather permitting, the games will resume as scheduled Monday. The Warrior tennis team's opener against McCluer North which was rained out Thursday is now scheduled for Monday at 4 p.m. Monday's scheduled match against Cahokia has been moved to April 20.

Saturday's Collinsville Invitational track meet, in which Madison was to compete, was postponed until Monday at 3:30 p.m.

West hires new football coach

By Scott Marion
Staff writer

BELLEVILLE — After six weeks, dozens of applications and countless hours of discussion, the Belleville District 201 Board of Education found its man.

At 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, the board announced it had hired Richard Hood, head coach at Ramoth High School, as the new head football coach for the Belleville West Maroons. It was time for board member George H. "Bill" Nold — part of the four-member district selection committee — to breathe a sigh of relief.

"It was really tough making the decision," Nold said. "But in the end, the consensus was that (Hood) was the best man for the job."

"He felt there's a challenge for him here. He's going to put in a style of football that is radically different from what we've seen in the past."

"He said, 'I can't promise anything. But somewhere along the line, we'll beat East St. Louis.'"

A succession of losses to East St. Louis and city rival Althoff were among the reasons why the board, in January, voted not to rehire Bruce Arnold as West's football coach. Arnold, who won 124 games in 20 seasons at West, is among five finalists for the head coaching job at Moline High School.

"I know the program has been in good hands," Hood said. "Bruce Arnold had some very successful years. I'm not going to make changes in the program just for the sake of change."

The selection committee received more than 50 applications for the job. The six finalists — interviewed March 13-14 — were Chuck Budd, head coach at Salem High School; Gary Mauser, head coach at Duplo High School; Brad Pancost, head coach at Mount Vernon High School; Mike Thebeau, head coach at Palos (Mo.) High School; Robin Cooper, assistant coach at Western Illinois University; and Hood.

The list of candidates was then narrowed to three before Hood was chosen.

The next step for the school board is appointing assistant coaches for next season. As of Thursday, district superintendent John Dozier said none of Arnold's assistants had announced whether they plan to return as members of Hood's staff.

"We'll look at all co-curricular appointments in April or May, which is the normal time," Dozier said. "The appointments are always for one year at a time."

Kahoks hosting sectional

Collinsville High School will be the host of the 15-team IHSA girls soccer sectional tournament this year.

Actually, only the final four of the tourney field will come to Collinsville to play. Games in two preliminary rounds will be played at the site of the higher-seeded team.

The sectional semifinals (May 26) and championship game (May 29) will be played on the new soccer field inside the campus track and field complex, Collinsville athletic director Frank Pitot said.

First-round preliminaries will be played May 19, 21 or 22. Second-round prelims will be played May 24.

Schools assigned to the Collinsville Sectional are the host Lady Kahoks; the Lady Warriors, Metro-East Lutheran, Alton, O'Fallon, Wood River, Quincy Senior, Quincy Notre-Dame, Chatham Glenwood, Jacksonville, Rochester, Springfield Langphier, Springfield Sacred Heart-Griffin, Springfield High and Springfield Southeast.

The state tournament at St. Charles High School in suburban Chicago is June 1-2.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST: Now, to figure out which is which. Believe it or not, that's Warrior soccer All-American John Van Boskirk giving it his all during a donkey basketball game on Wednesday at Memorial Gymnasium. University of Indiana soccer coach Jerry Yeagley might be interested in seeing just what he's getting next fall.

Family finds hope in citing denial

What was the answer? No one knew, so we ended up screaming at each other in frustration. "I need some help around here," I yelled. "Don't you understand? I'm ill from the chemo. I'm not your maid. I don't feel good, and I want you to help me."

My kids shot right back. "You never asked for help, at least not before. We aren't trained to help you. You never made us do this before. Besides, we can never tell when you're sick and when you're not."

"And when you are sick, you expect us to be your mother."

What started out as a family council had turned into finger-pointing, face-distorting verbal fistfights. I was conducting a pogrom, it seemed; they were waging guerrilla warfare.

Council dismissed. I sat down the next day and let the anger go.

Where were they coming from? My teen-age daughters are smack in the middle of extricating themselves from their childhoods. At the best of times, this passage is difficult, fraught with introspection and insensitivity to outside forces; sheer ego-centered work.

And yes, it's hard work to pull inside and battle through the feelings, intellectual, physical and emotional—that procure the calmer, more outward-oriented years of young adulthood.

Add mom's cancer to that, and it's a Herculean task.

Who wants to think about the possibility of a parent's death, especially a single parent?

The solution: Don't face it. She can't die if she's not sick, right?

Who wants to be forced into more responsibilities at a time when even making money baby-sitting slips in precedence to long telephone calls and after-school activities? Who wants to deal with fear and complaints from the one person who is supposed to be the protector?

Denial is a way of handling something we're not ready to face. And teenagers are experts at it; they can slip in and out of it constantly through their maturation—or a loved one's illness. Both events speak of time irretrievably lost to the inexorable force of the life cycle. Who needs to be reminded of that when life is just beginning—at least the part of life that is truly self-determined, truly one's own?

I re-called the council the next night. Funny thing, they must have gone through the same thought process as I. They targeted me space perfectly, the fear, anger, determination to drive something positive, the flying on gut and heart and sometimes crashing.

We talked a long time about each other's spaces. It was a good talk; it has led to more help for me—and more hope for them.

Take panes to fix leaky windows

When cold winds blow through the St. Louis area, make sure they aren't blowing dollars out your windows. One of the best ways to keep heating bills under control is to tighten up your home's windows with weather stripping.

Heat easily escapes through windows, especially those consisting of single panes of glass. It can seep through the sashes and frames as well as the glass itself.

Reducing seepage is easy and fairly inexpensive. First, make sure the outside of the window is properly caulked, with no gaps, cracks or missing chunks. If you find problems, remove the caulk, clean the area thoroughly and restrip with new caulk.

For the inside of the window, there are "stop moldings" that can be attached easily to the stops. These weatherstrips are made of flexible materials, such as felt, foam or hollow vinyl. They are easy to install and seldom interfere with the movement of the window.

There also are spring metal and V-shaped weatherstrips for installing on the inside of the window channel. They are invisible when the window is closed. These are generally neater and more durable than the flexible type, but are no more effective.

The best way to reduce heat loss through the glass is to replace the windows with double-paned insulated glass, or to add storm windows. These methods provide a means of creating a dead layer of air between you and the outside.

If you have any questions about weatherstripping or any other home improvement project, call me at Central Hardware's Mr. Tinker Hotline, (314) 946-3000.

The Albion Home gives double pleasure

The Albion features two-story living at its level best. Downstairs, guests are entertained, children romp and meals are prepared.

Upstairs, the king and queen of the house hold court. This top hat atop the one-story home is their private domicile.

This separation of habitat makes the brick Albion perfect for a family, a single professional or a retired couple.

Guests to the Albion are greeted by a stair-lined foyer with nearby bathroom. To the left lies the fireplace-equipped 19-by-17-foot living room, the 11-by-10 dining room and the 9-by-10 kitchen. Though separately named, this trio of rooms really functions as one. Each blends into the other. The cook can even prepare a meal while holding conversation over the patio bar.

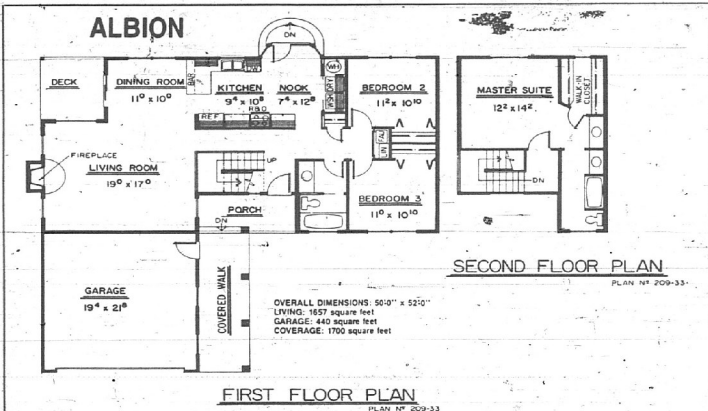

One step outside the dining room, finds a guest enjoying the view from a covered deck. Meanwhile, backyard access is made easy through the kitchen.

When the party's over or after a long day of wrestling with the kids, everyone has his or her own place to go. The two 11-by-10 downstairs bedrooms—perfect for kids or guests—each has a walk-in closet and a shared bath.

Upstairs, you can sink into luxury via a huge walk-in closet and a two-sink vanity. This second-story sanctuary provides the perfect getaway without having to leave the house.

For a study plan of the Albion (209-33), send $5 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering. Designers, Architects and readers with plans they would like to see featured also are invited to contact Landmark.)

Parents' support boosts children

A preschool child tried to pour himself a glass of milk and ended up spilling the milk all over the kitchen floor.

There is nothing very unusual about that scenario. What was unusual was the mother's reaction.

Instead of scolding her child, she praised him for trying something new. Then she sat down and played in the milk with him and proceeded to help him experiment with different ways of holding the milk carton to find a way he could pour it by himself.

This unusual woman was the mother of Jonas Saik, the man widely credited with inventing the vaccine that cured polio. Jack Canfield cites this story to demonstrate how self-esteem is crucial to the development of responsible, independent adults who are able to take risks. He says Saik uses this incident as an example of how his early training prepared him to pursue his adult work.

Canfield travels the country lecturing on the importance of self-esteem and what parents and teachers can do to develop self-esteem in children. He is a former university teacher and psychologist, and holds degrees from the University of Massachusetts and Harvard University.

Canfield says the most important message he has is that parents are not spending enough time with their children. Although quality of time together is important, quantity is equally important, Canfield says.

"Children have a tremendous need for a role model," Canfield says. And parents need to be with their children in order to provide that model. Self-confidence comes from successfully surviv-

Homeowners find glamour in glass

Glass block, a building material dating back to the 1940s, once again has made its way into home fashion. And homeowners, interior designers and architects are using it in new and exciting ways.

In addition to its popular role as quality replacement windows, glass block is being used in a variety of creative applications such as room partitions, shower stalls, stairwells, skylights and entryways, and as bases for countertops and bars.

Think vertically to add closet storage

After packing away a season's wardrobe, rethink and respace your closet for better efficiency, advises an interior space expert. Doing so will help you save time and avoid frustration, she says.

"Respacing maximizes available space and can actually double the accessible storage capacity of your closets," says Judith Miley, who heads the Center for Home Organization and Interior Space Efficiency (CHOISE), a Florida-based group of designers, space planners, architects and manufacturers of home-organizing systems.

Citing economic, safety and convenience reasons for respacing, Miley offers several simple tips for closets that also could apply to pantries, children's rooms and utility rooms. The key is to "think vertically" and to rethink storage areas that have not been changed for years.

"Sometimes you can eliminate bulky storage furniture or free up kitchen drawers by centralizing such things as nightwear, intimate wear and sweaters or placemats, dish towels and other kitchen linens in affordable coated wire drawer systems," she says. "Place these drawer systems right in your closet or pantry to save steps."

You will have room for drawer systems in your closet if you double-hang coated wire shelf-and-rod for sportswear, Miley says. Your separate can be tied above and below one another across half the width of your closet, using the vertical hanging space more efficiently.

"Few of us need more than about 1 or 2 feet of long-hang space for dresses, robes, jumpsuits and coats," Miley says. "You can either place your drawer system against the side wall leaving the long-hanging space adjacent to the tiered separates, or align the tiered separates, perhaps with a nine-pair shoe organizer on the wall above it."

Not only do wall- or door-mounted shoe racks unclutter closet floors, retard mildew and speed selection of matching pairs, they are also easy on your back because they allow shoes to be seen and reached easily, Miley says.

Miley adds that Clairson International, manufacturer of Closet Maid shelving, drawer systems and storage accessories, offers a toll-free line for consumers wanting to receive closet design books and the location of retailers or installing dealers who can help them respace their entire home. Josephine Baker now on video

Two of Josephine Baker's musicals finally played New York City in 1989 — 55 years after she filmed them — and the star characteristically took the town by storm.

The fact that she had been dead for 14 years didn't matter: Manhattanites flocked to the SoHo Repertory Cinema showing her movies as if "Batman" were on the bill. Thankfully, these gems now are on video.

Josephine Baker (1906-1975) was the black American cabaret performer who added dignity to the term "career move." In the 1920s, she removed herself from the country's racial prejudice by packing up her act and taking it to Paris, where she created a sensation. In true Hollywood fashion, she eventually was offered a movie contract, but not from a Hollywood studio. Her contract was with French producers, so Baker made her backstage musicals on the Seine and not on the Pacific.

Diana Ross has campaigned for the past 20 years to play Baker on screen, but until now, no studio has thought this remarkable entertainer's story would make a profitable movie.

HBO just has begun production of a film biography of Baker starring an unknown performer that will air sometime next year.

If you don't want to wait until then, try Kino International Video, which is releasing the two Baker films that played New York City last year, "Princess Tam Tam" (1934) and "Zou Zou" (1935), for $29.95 each. The first film is a mix of "A Star Is Born" and "The Wild Child." Baker plays a Tunisian beauty befriended by a visiting Parisian writer. He pulls the old "Pygmalion" routine and tries to pass off Baker as an Indian princess to the folks back home. Everything's going fine until he takes her to an art deco nightclub and she hears that jazz beat bumping on the stage. Baker lets loose, showing us her fab dancing in all its glory. The nightclub patrons are impressed, too, and Baker becomes a star. You get the picture.

Mason Wiley

Art imitates life in "Zou Zou," in which Baker undertakes the same role her Missouri mother played in real life — a washerwoman. In Baker's case, the laundress is a French waif with a half-brother, who just happens to be portrayed by the Jean Gabin, the French Clark Gable. The plot is a melodrama about lost siblings, but Baker gets out of the laundry room and onto a music hall stage. In a foreshadowing of the go-go girls of the '60s, Baker performs one number in a cage. Dressed in feathers, she sings as she swings on a bar.

To sample the work of black American performers who stayed in the United States while Baker was off cavorting in France, turn to Southern Methodist University in Dallas. Its Black Cinema Collection at the Southwest film/video archives is releasing "That's Black Entertainment" (1990, $29.95), a compendium of entertainers from the '30s through the '60s.

Fans of Bessie Smith and Nat King Cole should take note of this rare performance footage, and tereporeans should check out the legendary hooper Bill Robinson. (1990, $29.95), a compendium of entertainers from the '30s through the '60s.

Best Bet? "Field of Dreams" (1989, MCA Home Video, $29.95). Cash in on its Academy Award nomination for Best Picture, this paean to dreamers and baseball is now out on video. Viewers who want adult sophistication should veer toward Kevin Costner's sexier baseball movie, "Bull Durham" (1989, Orion Home Video, $19.95), where the star meets his match in the sensational Susan Sarandon. "Ran" (1985, CBS/Fox Video, re-released at $29.98): Akira Kurosawa's variation on Shakespeare's "King Lear" took an Oscar for its striking costume design. When this family feud gets out of hand hundreds of color-coded soldiers plunge into battle. A perfectionist, Kurosawa would wait for cloud formations he liked before shooting any of his masterful footage of period warlords in action. Miko Harada portrays a scheming in-law with all the venom of Joan Crawford in a Japanese robe.

JED (BUDDY EBSSEN) and the rest of the Clamptett clan took Beverly Hills by storm in the 1960s sitcom "The Beverly Hillbillies."

"The Beverly Hillbillies" (CBS Video Library, $7.40 each, each video contains three 30-minute episodes, (000-CBS-4094): Go ahead, laugh, but this hit sitcom of the 1960s that was routinely criticized for its lack of intellectual content still packs a satirical punch. And its comedy doesn't seem so far-fetched when the Beverly Hills on the show is compared to the Los Angeles of today. The cast is perfect, particularly Nancy Kulp's Beverly Hills secretary Jane Hathaway, a woman for all seasons. Sample dialogue: Jane, "Jethro, have you decided to forego the party?" Jethro, "Yes, ma'am, we're all for going."

Screamin' Eagle to be faster

Six Flags' Over Mid-America's Screamin' Eagle wooden roller coaster will have new and faster cars reaching speeds up to 70 miles per hour when the amusement park opens Saturday, April 7.

Since 1976, more than 17 million riders have taken 669,121 trips around the three-quarter mile track. The former cars peaked at 62 miles per hour.

While new cars were being designed and built for the Screamin' Eagle, the huge structure underwent a major face lift. Since last October, painters have climbed the 110-foot-tall coaster to apply 10,000 gallons of fresh paint to the 105 miles of lumber that constitute the Screamin' Eagle.

The Screamin' Eagle now features two new trains that are comprised of six cars. The major contribution to the increased speed comes from the fact that each car, with the exception of the lead car, only has two sets of wheels versus four, thereby creating less friction and less resistance on the track.

Six Flags opens at 10 a.m. Saturday, and will be open weekends only through May 20.

Do you want to know what's going on in the world? You can find out by reading the news. But what if you don't have time to read the news? Or what if you don't have a newspaper? Or what if you don't have a television? Or what if you don't have a radio? Or what if you don't have a computer? Or what if you don't have a smartphone? Or what if you don't have a tablet? Or what if you don't have a smartwatch? Or what if you don't have a smart home? Or what if you don't have a smart car? Or what if you don't have a smart city? Or what if you don't have a smart world?
